Has the post id so it already has data about the original content, time, user, and url.

But it should have its own time of posting as well as its own url, and its own content if the reposter wants to add something to the original post.

A repost should only reference to one post at a time, and one post could have 0 or many reposts.

A user can have 0 or many reposts, but a repost should be unique to a user.